Graduate Academic Policy Equity Audit Working Group

Charge:

The Graduate Student Equity Audit Working Group was charged with an examination of policies that could have differential impacts on graduate students including attention to (but not limited to): race and ethnicity, gender and gender identity, sexual orientation, socioeconomic status, language, culture, national origin, religion, age, (dis)ability status, and first generation college student status. The impact of the pandemic made this assessment a pressing concern.

Challenges

• The committee's feedback often went beyond the scope of equity, which extended the time needed to review each policy.

• It was necessary to define the different experience of graduate students to undergraduate students.

• The differing application of policy across colleges required discussion with multiple units to ensure that the policy was clear and applied equitably.
Accomplishments

• The equity audit review process provided a protocol to consider equity when drafting, implementing and assessing policy.

• We developed a better understanding of how policy review may be affected by implicit bias and the difference between equality and equity.
